Specialized training and extensive experience are essential to performing successful Mohs surgery, the most advanced and effective procedure for the preservation of healthy tissue and the removal of basal and squamous cell carcinomas. I am one of the few highly educated, board-certified dermatologists in New Jersey to have completed a two-year skin cancer fellowship at the University of Iowa in Mohs micrographic surgery, reconstruction, and laser surgery. In practice for over 24 years, I have performed over 20,000 Mohs surgeries and reconstructions. My expertise also includes the skill of examining tissue slides under a microscope as part of the Mohs procedure to ensure the cancer has been completely removed. I am proud to have been recognized by my peers as a New Jersey Monthly Top Doctor since 2017, as well as a NJ Top Doc, a division of USA Top Docs, every year since 2013. I continue to share my knowledge at medical conferences around the country, as well as with medical students and residents.

My commitment to patients is paramount; at my practice, I treat each of them as if they are members of my family. I take the time to explain the Mohs procedure thoroughly and evaluate each situation on an individual basis. In addition to performing Mohs surgery, I also offer natural-looking cosmetic treatments using lasers and fillers, plus hair-loss treatment options. All of these services are offered in a professional environment that is attentive, friendly, and a place where patients always receive the best possible care.
