We at Sunnyvale Cardiology are actively working to adapt to the evolving impact of COVID-19 virus to our communities, while making sure that we assist you with your ongoing cardiology needs. We will remain available for our patients during this time via telephone, telemedicine visits, and limited in person office visits to assist with your medical needs and prescription refills.

Telemedicine visits are now available at Sunnyvale Cardiology for all routine, non-urgent visits. Please call our office for an appointment.

We also remain available to see new patients in person and provide in office testing, when appropriate.

For any patient requiring an office visit: Patients will be screened before they arrive for their appointment. If the screening reveals a significant risk of infection or infection exposure, the appointment will be re-scheduled. Patients entering our offices will be limited to no more than one visitor. The accompanying person will be required to complete the screening procedures at the time of the visit. Patients will undergo further screening on-site upon arrival. As able, patients will be escorted as rapidly as possible to an exam room to minimize waiting room time and maintain CDC guidelines on social distancing.

If you or anyone in your household has respiratory symptoms or a fever, we ask that you please do not come into the office. We can assess your cardiology issues via telehealth and develop an appropriate care plan. If you do require an in-office visit, please limit yourself to only one person accompanying you to the office.

We are here to support the safety of the community and we are here to serve you.
