Medicare has specific rules covering payment for mycotic (fungal) toenails. In order for Medicare to cover the debridement (cutting) of nails, one must have pain associated with the condition and/or have a medical condition such as Diabetes or poor circulation. If I have been told by my doctor that I do not have a qualifying condition, I must pay the doctor for the services today and I will not be reimbursed by Medicare. The following best describes my situation. However, if I was seen by my doctor within 61 days for mycotic nail treatment, I must pay for that service and Medicare will not reimburse me.

- I have marked limitation of ambulation (walking) when the infected toenails become thickened.
- There is pain resulting from thickening and dystrophy of the infected toenails.
- The above two statements do not apply to me. I understand I must pay for today's visit and Medicare will not reimburse me if I elect to have my toenails cut today.
