Just $250 for the SRT treatment

must be performed the day before the SRT treatment begins.

Scar must be assessed by June 7. Call today!

Hypertrophic scars

excessive collagen deposits appear raised,
but not to the degree observed with keloids

Keloid scars

can appear as a firm, rubbery lesion or shiny, fibrous nodules

A hypertrophic scar is a thick and raised scar in which the excess tissue remains within the boundaries of the original injury. This is not a treatment for hypertrophic scars.

A keloid is a scar caused by an excessive amount of collagen and fibrous tissue in the area, causing distortion, itching, and sometimes pain. Unlike hypertrophic scars, keloid tissue tends to grow beyond the boundaries of the original scar.

Platelet Rich Fibrins!

Platelet Rich Fibrin (PRF) is an advanced form of PRP (Platelet Rich Plasma) that has long been used in dentistry and orthopedics. Using the patient's own blood, PRF is extracted. PRF contains concentrated growth factors and stem cells which promote tissue regeneration and hair growth when applied to or injected in a treatment area. Because PRF is all natural, there is no chance of an adverse allergic reaction to the patient.

Microneedling with PRF

Microneedling can improve skin conditions including laxity and acne scars. When
